The First Thing In The Morning

Read Tribune Want Ads

You are wanting something every day, and every day in the classified advertising columns of The Tribune somebody is offering to supply a myriad of just such wants as

Turn to these want ads the first thing every morning. Get the habit of reading them. They are rich in suggestion even if they do not always tell you of some particular thing that you will want to write to the advertiser about.

But there will be very few days when you cannot find something that will be of special interest to you—something that you will want to buy.

It may be farm land, a city lot, a piano, collection of oil paintings or bric-a-brac, an automobile, a horse or a business—there is no class of property, merchandise or interest that is not represented in The Tribune want ad pages from time to time—new things in the same line day after day.

To know the real value of these little classified ads you should make use of this department as an advertiser yourself. Make the test and you will understand why there were nearly a million of these ads in The Tri bune last year.
